

Vishanth Weerakkody is a Professor of Digital Governance and Deputy Dean for the Faculty of Management, Law and Social Sciences at University of Bradford. Previously, served as Head of School of Management and Associate Dean, Planning and Resources for the Faculty of Management, Law and Social Sciences at Bradford and Professor of Digital Governance and External Collaborations at Brunel Business School, Brunel University London. Received PhD from University of Hertfordshire and MSc from City University, London, UK. Worked in industry for several years in the field software development and systems analysis and design. Held various IT positions in multinational organisations, including IBM UK before changing career to become an academic. Has many years of R&D experience in the field of process transformation and digital governance. Successfully completed multiple European Commission (FP7, H2020) and Internationally (Qatar Foundation, British Council) Funded projects in Evaluating Technology Adoption and Diffusion in the Public Sector, Process Transformation and Organisational Change, Public Sector Policy Modelling, Social Innovation, Smart City, e-participation and e-governance, and youth skills and capacity building. A member of the British Computer Society, Chartered IT professional and a Fellow of the UK Higher Education Academy. Emiratus Editor-in-chief, International Journal of Electronic Government Research.